Start this fun DIY journey and make amazing pieces of friendship bracelets with sentimental value. Friendship bracelets are handmade bracelets that are usually given as a symbol of friendship, love, or loyalty. They are made by tying knots with colorful threads, beads, or other materials, and can have various patterns and designs. Friendship bracelets are popular because they are fun, easy, and inexpensive to make, and you can customize them to suit your personal style and preferences. They also show that you care about someone and appreciate their friendship. To make a friendship bracelet, you will need some basic materials and tools, such as: Embroidery thread. This is the most common material for making friendship bracelets, as it comes in a wide range of colors and is durable and smooth. You can also use yarn, leather cord, fabric scraps, or any other type of thread you like. Beads. These are optional, but they can add some sparkle and texture to your bracelet. You can use any kind of beads you like, such as glass, plastic, metal, or wood. Just make sure they have holes that are big enough for your thread to pass through. Clasps. These are also optional, but they can make it easier to put on and take off your bracelet. You can use any kind of clasp you like, such as lobster claw, toggle, or magnetic. Alternatively, you can make a loop and knot closure with your thread. Scissors. You will need a pair of sharp scissors to cut your thread and trim the excess ends. Tape measure. You will need this to measure the length of your thread and your wrist. Tape or safety pin. You will need this to secure your bracelet to a surface while you work on it. There are four main types of knots that you will need to know to make friendship bracelets: forward, backward, forward-backward, and backward-forward. These knots are used to create different patterns and effects by changing the order and direction of the threads. Here is how to make each knot: Forward knot. Take the first thread (the one on the left) and cross it over the second thread (the one on the right), forming a 4 shape. Bring the first thread behind the second thread and pull it through the loop. Pull the first thread up until you feel resistance. Repeat this step with the same threads to complete the knot. Backward knot. Take the first thread (the one on the left) and cross it under the second thread (the one on the right), forming a P shape. Bring the first thread over the second thread and pull it through the loop. Pull the first thread down until you feel resistance. Repeat this step with the same threads to complete the knot. Forward-backward knot. Make a forward knot with the first and second threads, then make a backward knot with the same threads. Backward-forward knot. Make a backward knot with the first and second threads, then make a forward knot with the same threads. You can combine these knots in different ways to create different patterns, such as stripes, chevrons, zig-zags, diamonds, or letters. A friendship bracelet pattern is a diagram that shows how to arrange the threads and what knots to make with them. It usually has numbers or letters that represent each thread color, and symbols that represent each knot type. For example: This pattern shows how to make a simple striped bracelet with four colors: red, yellow (Y), green (G), and blue (B). The arrows indicate forward knots (>) or backward knots (
