

Click Here

Are original cabbage patch dolls valuable

Moreover, the toys have soft bodies. There are many vintage cabbage patch dolls worth $500 to $2000. In 2014, Cabbage Patch dolls were re-released, and they proved to be quite popular - which shows that kids still love them. Signed signature stamps, tags, and a copyright notice helps identify Cabbage Patch dolls. Signed Little People dolls (1980): $2,000 to $3,000 Signed Little People dolls (1979): $1,250 to $1,750 Unsigned Little People dolls (1979): $350 Freckled Little People dolls (1979): $40 to $100 Each of the "Little People Original" dolls has a unique name, which also increases the rarity and collectability of these dolls.[10] 2 Rare Cabbage Patch dolls Teresa Ann and Barry Fritz are the rarest and most valuable Cabbage Patch dolls in this list. It was made in the 1940s. The production of Hummel figurines has transferred from one administration to the other since. Another feature they have added is the thumb-sucking feature. You can compare your figurine with this table here for valuation. At any rate, this 1950s work of art is valuable and put up for $937.16. Read on to learn more! Cabbage Patch Kid dolls vary in price depending on their condition, but the average doll can sell for $20 to $500, and many have sold for at least $100. Cabbage Patch dolls from earlier times are typically worth $500 to $2000, while standard dolls with vinyl heads usually cost between $10 to $30. The dolls were "adopted" by approximately 3 million by the end of the year. Vintage Cabbage Patch Dolls Originally, Cabbage Patch dolls reached the peak of their popularity in the 1980s since that was the time when most kids wanted one. See also Antique Singer Sewing Machine Table6. Older models typically had a full bee, a homage to Hummel's name which means bumblebee in German. However, the head of the doll is made of plastic. 10. What Is the Most Valuable Original Cabbage Patch Dolls 1983? The signature also identifies the year of manufacture. How Much Are Hummel Figurines Worth? Kids can play with the doll in different ways, so they're given some freedom to choose how they do so. Sold For: $900.00 This little lady from 1985 is named Yvonne Mellie, accorded to her included, unopened birth certificate. By doing this, kids can customize their dolls to their liking and have a lot of fun in the process. 14. Collectors buy Hummel figurines. Cabbage Patch Dolls were alleged to be unique. Here are some popular places to sell. Porcelain. This article focuses on the most unique and valuable Hummel figurines ever sold. The Goebel trademark Logos Numbers and other nomenclatures Factory control number Signs of forgery Features Weight Colors The Goebel Trademark Look for the trademark of Goebel on the figurine. And prices can be fair too. The price may have something to do with the number of them, or not. Consequently, they can give the doll more details, which children love. Production moved from this number all the way to TMK-8 which is the newest of the figurines. They settled the case out of court for an undisclosed amount of money.[17] Ask a Question Advertisement This article was co-authored by wikiHow staff writer, Cheyenne Main. It is valued $829.99. Fakes are usually lighter which is all they can be. She is valued at $275. From its birth in 1935 till recently more than a million miniature figures have been produced. Who buys Hummel figurines? Japanese Version Cabbage Patch dolls (1983): $2,800 to $5,000 Spanish Version Cabbage Patch dolls (1984): $1,260 German Version Cabbage Patch dolls (2023): $440 4 Special edition, discontinued, and commemorative dolls Cabbage Patch Kid dolls that have been discontinued or were part of a special edition or commemorative line tend to be more valuable than regular dolls.[13] Some of the most valuable of these include: All-Star Stadium MLB Detroit doll (1902): $5,000 to $9,500 Signed Baseball Cabbage Patch doll (1985): $3,500 Coleco Dental Braces doll (1982): $900 to $1,000 Growing Hair doll (1980): $800 to $1,000 Christmas doll (1978): $1000 Micky Mantle Cabbage Patch doll (1985): $500 or more Splash r Tan doll (1991): $500 to $750 Coleco Presmie doll (1983): $200 to $300 Special Olympic Edition Cabbage Patch doll (1996): $100 to $200 Advertisement Cabbage Patch Kids were created by Xavier Roberts in the late 1970's. As well as using plastic materials, they were able to add more detail to the head. How Much Are Cabbage Patch Dolls Worth? This one was modeled after Arthur Moeller in 1935. Little People Tilly Kay Year: 1979 Price: $350 Cabbage Patch Dolls aren't exactly Little People Dolls, but this doll was their inspiration, making it incredibly valuable and collectible. Weight All Hummel figurines are made from porcelain. Rarely Limited edition figurines were not produced in large numbers. 3. 1985 Yvonne Millie Year: 1985 Price: $100-$1000 Yvonne Mellie is the name of this little doll from 1985, based on the birth certificate included with it. The figurines are also stamped with the company's logo. These items are rarely sold together which makes this pair very valuable. Cheyenne Main is an Editing Fellow at wikiHow, currently living in Kansas City. A birth certificate and adoption papers increase the value of a doll. She is featured wearing a ribbon on her brown short hair, her clothes are decorated with spots of red flowers. The figurines were presented at the Leipzig trade fair which was a major European show. From mere paintings to sculpted porcelain figurines, Hummel's work has come a long way down us. Growing Hair, Designer Line, Sippin' Kid, and Talking Kid dolls might also be rare because they have unique head molds. Auction houses This is one of the best places to sell your figurine. You may be able to sell this doll in good condition for around $3,500 today if they are in good condition. So, let's begin. If you've just been browsing eBay for collectibles and have a few hours to spare, this is the perfect article for you. It is valued at $3179.99. Hummel figurines are still being produced in the original factory in Rodental, Germany. To get the highest price for these dolls, try to include the original clothing and an intact birth certificate and/or box.[11] Mattel Cabbage Patch (transitional dolls (1995): $1,000 to $6,000 Signed Agatha Wilda (1985): $3,500 James Dudley (1985): $3,000 Signed Andree Henka (1983): $2,988 Barry Fritz (1979): $1,000 to $2,000 Teresa Ann (1985): $850 to $2,000 Megan Maryllis (1987): $500 to $1,000 Yvonne Millie (1985): $800 to $1,000 Elvin Tony/"Red Fuzzies" (1982): $800 Anne Greta (1985): $250 to $850 Felicia Francis (1979): $850 Andrew Blair (1979): $500 to $750 Adam Gregory (1979): $500 to $750 Cabbage Patch Twins dolls (1985): $500 Roddy Cyrano (1985): $500 Iddy Budds Edition dolls (1987): $350 to $600 Zora Mae (1992): $100 to $250 3 Cabbage Patch dolls from other countries Cabbage Patch Kid dolls that were produced in a different country tend to sell for more money than those produced and sold in the United States.[12] You can tell if yours is from a different country by looking at the tag on the doll or the back of the box. Excellent TMK 1 Crown Mark Goebel Hummel Shop Girl Figurine Year: 1930s Price: $415 This figure is called the Shoppirl. This makes it easy for you to spot a difference, hence the fake one. Lot of 6 Hummel Figurines Year: 1980s Price: $240 This collection is from the 1980s. Some fakes are made of plastic or materials like chalk and plaster. Logos Source:pinterest You can identify Hummel figurines by the logo on the bottom as well. Schlaifer had acquired the unique worldwide licensing rights to the brand and renamed it 'Cabbage Patch Kids.' These cabbage patch dolls broke toy industry sales records three years in a row. She has over four years of editorial experience, with work published in a variety of literary magazines. The 1985 Teresa Ann was the most valuable cabbage patch doll, selling for $2,000 on eBay. It has the incised crown on the bottom which puts it among Hummel's work done between the years 1935 and 1945. 4. Some are more established than others. They thus have excellent chances of developing their creative thinking skills. In 2013 the company went bankrupt and was taken over by another company in 1914. There are also different colors of signature stamps, which correspond to the year of production. People believe they took inspiration from Xavier Roberts's little soft sculpture dolls called the Little People, sold as collectibles. Your child will be able to play more imaginatively when using this technique. Toys R' Us: Gold side tags (2011), dark purple (2011), dark green (2002), hot pink (2003), silver (2003), dark blue (2004), glittery blue (2005 Holiday Edition), and forest green (2005 Fantasy Edition). Assuming you have done your homework: you've established authenticity, value, and age. This cute painting was created in the 1960s. This number can be cross-checked with online resources to give additional identification help. This doll features a soft body, making it easy and pleasant to cuddle with. Where Can I Sell My Hummel Figurines? Some say it may have been made earlier than that since it was a gift at the end of the second world war. Then the next thing is to make your choice of where to make money off your Hummel figurines. By the 1970s the market for Hummel figurines had grown to the point where the prices were skyrocketing. Many stores had lengthy waiting lists, while others had a first-come, first-served policy, leading to shocking, vicious battles between buyers. They are both valuable considering their age. Broadcast the sale if you can. Further, if you are a cabbage patch dolls fan and want to know more about them, this article will help. 14 Rare Cabbage Patch Dolls 1979 Freckled Little People Doll Hand Signed Little People Twins Following are the 15 rarest cabbage patch dolls that have been available till now. Goebel used a bee and V symbol for identification. 1 The dolls are more valuable if the box, doll, and adoption papers are intact. The number is either cast with the figurine so that you can feel it bump the tip of your finger when you rub it, or they are incised into the surface of the figurine. It all began with the woman called sister Maria Innocentia who made sketches art, mostly pastoral drawings of children. How many Hummel figurines are there? It is called the Iprechaun's chest. It is vintage and is considered very rare. Collectors will find you. Petunia The Pig Year: 2001 Price: $14 For its body, the Petunia doll uses soft materials that kids enjoy. However, the re-release includes newer designs that aren't as valuable. When the second world war ended, American soldiers stationed in West Germany began sending the figurines back home as gifts which further increased the popularity of the figurines. There is a one-line notice in some cases, while there is a three-line notice in others. In this way, they can play more creatively. 6. The production is overseen by the authorities of the Convent of Siesseu where sister Maria Innocentia worked and lived. Your own Hummel can be more valuable than this. 7. Though not much was said about her on her listing, she still managed to bring in a great price, even without her papers of box. Hummel figurines follow closely the same features and size as the paintings of Maria Innocentia. Signs of Forgery Placing an original besides a suspect figurine can help you spot the glaring difference in style. Spring Cheer Goebel Hummel Figurine Incised Crown Year: 1930s Price: $239.99 The Spring Cheer is hard to come by. These dolls tend to be more valuable because the Kids might have Coleco head molds and Hasbro bodies and clothes.[5] 4 Special edition dolls can also be more valuable if in the right condition. Kept in a doll cabinet for most of her life, her excellent condition was able to make her both rare and valuable. Each one looked different due to the different shapes of their heads, eyes, hairstyles, and clothing. This doesn't reduce the value of each of them, it only represents the seller's wish to sell them all at once. These figures were made by Goebel in 1985 and they have his signature on them as well. Their use of plastic materials in the design of the head was also impressive. Hummel figurines have been enjoyed for decades, but it takes a little bit of luck to get your hands on the rarest pieces. Are you a collector? The thumb sucking feature is a great way to entertain your kids. Advertisement 3 Transitional dolls or 1980s dolls made by Coleco can also be valuable. For more information, you can also join the Cabbage Patch Collector's Club to communicate with other collectors and buy or sell your doll.[2] 2 Cabbage Patch dolls with Xavier Roberts's signature are more valuable. The item features a boy dressed in country clothes, a cap on his head, a duffel bag slung over his shoulder and a walking stick painted green in his hand. The porcelain is poured into a mold and heated at high temperatures. Final Thoughts Delve into the quaint world of Hummel's figurines. One of its most distinguishing features is its hair. It is worth hundreds of dollars because it is unopened and has all the original dress and birth certificate in perfect condition, making it an ideal gift for someone special. Sold For: $750.00 This little lady is from the La Princess collection and was born in 1985. Sold For: $698.00 This adorable infant comes with his own birth certificate which identifies him as Andrew Blair. They are valued together here at $240 9. In 1983, it was Cabbage Patch Kids. 1. All you need are clear photos of the items, post, and wait for buyers. A collector will also examine the position of the head mold number. All of which have a fundamental role to play in its success. Besides, Coleco dolls carry a copyright notice in many places around the head. They are 7 inches tall and hand-painted in red, yellow, and green colors. Discontinued Hummel Figurines Year: 1950s Price: $250 Sometimes you'll find an assembly of figurines packed together for sale. Iddy Budds Ranny Year: 1987 Price: $350 You shouldn't forget about the Iddy Budds Ranny if you're starting out collecting rare Cabbage Patch Kids dolls. Demand Find out if your figurine is popular. It comes with its original box, red hair, and clothes. Children have also enjoyed the thumb sucking available feature in this doll. Makers of imitations are unable to replicate the exact mix of porcelain. They are websites where they advertise their interest in buying your figurine. Condition If the figurine comes in its original box and is in great condition; with no scratches, breaks, or cracks, the value goes up 10 times higher than the same model but in poor condition. It is an excellent addition to any youngster's collection because it is unique. However, if the right collector comes along, you may be able to sell it for even more money. On April 20, 2021, the doll sold for $2000 on eBay. It is said that only 75 of these were made. Consequently, your child will be able to play with more imagination, which improves their imaginative thinking abilities. Here, you will find the 15 rarest cabbage patch dolls, including their price guide and a lot more. 1985 CPK Doll Year: 1985 Price: $20-$100 The CPK Doll should be your choice if you wish to obtain a vintage Cabbage Patch Kid in its original, unopened packaging. They look like the models were playing a sort of children's game when Hummel sculpted them or they may have been what Maria Innocentia painted. By 1982, Roger L. The article is detailed and logically structured, with good references." Share your story The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. Expert Cabbage Patch doll collectors can provide additional information regarding an individual doll's authenticity. 4. We've covered 15 of the most valuable cabbage patch dolls in this detailed guide. And these ones are worth more than the $200 the seller put them up for. If you have a Hummel figurine in your possession and have identified it to be original, you may also wonder how you can value it for sale. The downside here is they may be more expensive if buyers are more than sellers. Internet marketplace As mentioned before, eBay and Etsy are good places to both scout for figurines and sell them. But you can tell a lot of Hummel figurines were made by the number that's listed on eBay alone for sale. With this feature, your child can cuddle up to the doll easily. It is a permanent sign that allows you to tell an authentic figurine from a fake. They were created around the 70s and are valued together at $399. Attached to his shoulder is a bunch of carrots. Online auctions and shops eBay comes to mind. See also 20 Rare And Most Sought After Mccoy Pottery [Marks & Values]At any rate, you do have to consider the following factors that influence the value of your Hummel figurines. Apparently, each figure was not made in the same year. It is more common for the signature stamp of Xavier Roberts to appear on the left cheek of a doll. There is no exact number recorded. Cabbage Patch Dolls History American parents frantically sought the coveted cabbage patch dolls during the 1983 Christmas season. Between 1990 and 1991, Hasbro dolls were available in mauve, teal, and forest green. Those new to collecting should be cautious about fake dolls that appear authentic. Teresa Ann Year: 1985 Price: $850-$2,000 It's hard to find rare cabbage patch dolls such as Teresa Ann, a doll sold on eBay for more than $2,000 in 1985. Due to her quality condition, she brought close to $1000. They are one and the same. Also, check Etsy. Before you purchase a collectible it is important to know how to identify a real Hummel figurine. 9. Shelby the Blue-Eyed Year: 2015 Price: $12.99 There was a lot of love given to the soft body of the Shelby Blue Eyed Sheep doll. Every mass-marketed Cabbage Patch Kid doll has a number printed on the back of its head, which indicates the mold design.[7] Coleco molds include numbers 1 through 49 (there is no 7 or 13), and the rare molds include "Brat" faces from 1983 (they tend to go for $100 to $500). A hand-signed set of this doll had last been sold for $3,500 in 2018. These figurines are considered very valuable and expected to increase in price from the initial $399. They come cheap there as well. The doll is made of plastic materials that provide a distinctive design that kids enjoy for its head. In 1979, Little People Tilly Kay debuted in a mint green outfit complete with shoes and socks. Also, they love the vintage look of this doll. The closer the number of the figurine to TMK-1, the more valuable the figurine is. It was first called The Timid Hunter when it was made by Hummel. Hence they are more valuable. The Artist Goebel Hummel Figurine Year: 1960s Price: $319.99 This figure is called The Artist. Now, Cheyenne loves learning new topics and helping to create well-researched, accessible resources for readers. Jewel Unicorn Year: 2003 Price: $24.95 These dolls come with fantastic, brightly colored outfits and have been a huge hit with kids. They seem to be having a friendly conversation. A perfect condition doll of this doll sold for as much as $350. School Boys Hummel Figurine Year: 1980s Price: $399 These schoolboys are considering the answer to a math question. Auction houses If you are looking to become a collector you can buy figurines at auction houses. It takes some skill to fashion porcelain into this design. The cabbage patch dolls became an international sensation, with many collectors still keeping their originals. While Cabbage Patch Kids are still being produced, there's now a huge market for new and vintage dolls as collector's items. Makers of fake Hummel try to copy this palette but can't quite achieve it. How to Identify Cabbage Patch Dolls? This figurine is an absolute beauty and is valued at $415. Teresa Ann was the most valuable Cabbage Patch doll to sell in 1985. Vintage Goebel Hummel Umbrella Boy And Girl Year: 1970s Price: $399 These are some of the most valuable Hummel pairs of figurines ever put up for sale. When did Hummel figurines start? In April, another Cabbage Patch Doll with a pacifier, adoption documents, and double popcorn red hair sold for $810. On the other hand, a normal doll with a vinyl head usually costs $10 to $30. Sold For: $850.00 Meet Felicia Frances, a 1979 Xavier Roberts original. Collectors often use Hummel and Goebel interchangeably when referring to the figurines that Goebel made in porcelain. The company has a specific mix of porcelain for each figurine which makes them heavy. For example, you can easily tell the difference if you compare a fake umbrella boy with an original if the figure stoops too low under the umbrella. During the 1983 to 1989 period, Coleco dolls were stamped with black, brown, mint green signature stamps. Goebel began his production with the trademark TMK-1 which was the oldest of the marks. It is usually written as TMK beneath every figurine. Vintage Goebel Hummel Umbrella Boy And Girl Two Vintage Hummel Figurines Discontinued Hummel Figurines School Boys Hummel Figurine Rare - Hummel - Bookworm - Girl Sitting Down Reading A Book Lot of 6 Hummel figurines Ultra Rare Grandpa's Boy Goebel Hummel Figurine Excellent TMK 1 Crown Mark Goebel Hummel Shop Girl Figurine Hummel Goebel 87 For Father Spring Cheer Goebel Hummel Figurine Incised Crown Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel The Artist Goebel Hummel Figurine Rare Collectible Vintage Hummel Figurine "Sensitive Hunter" 1. The Leprechauns Chest Year: 1900s Price: $308.71 Although it is unknown when Goebel or Hummel created this piece of work, it is still considered rare and valuable. Ultra Rare Grandpa's Boy Goebel Hummel Figurine Year: 1900s Price: $829.99 This Grandpa kid figurine is definitely from the year before the 2000s. Authentic Cabbage Patch dolls can be identified by signatures, body tags, and copyright notice. The figurine is valued at $210. The doll can snuggle up to it because it feels cuddly. Here are the years of each signature according to the manufacturer: [3] Coleco: Black (1983), green (1984), black or blue (1985), red or dark pink (1986), aqua (1987), purple (1988), and light pink or rose (1989). The older the age of the figurine the more valuable it is. Since then, both he and his paperwork have been kept in excellent condition, making this Xavier Robert original a rare find. However, each period of production has its own logo. What Are Hummel Figurines? If it is, the value goes up. It features a boy in the pose of an artist, poised with his brush and holding his painting palette. It could be little variations like the expressions on the figure's face, the direction the figure faces, or any missing or displaced feature. As all collectors know, age and condition are very important in determining the value of vintage items. 2. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figurines too as they usually had a folkloric appearance. 8. Take a look at this list and see if you can find a few familiar names on it. It is a delight to see just how far any idea, be they paintings, can go. It was made in the 1930s. His tag identifies him as Barry Fritz and the fact that his clothes aren't original doesn't seem to have brought down his value. For example, the Little Boy Painting on the listings in this article is numbered #304. Size and Sophistication You may have seen a Hummel figurine and wondered how it was made because of the complexities. Rare 1935 TKM1 Goebel Hummel Year: 1935 Price: $275 Here is a vintage and rare figure of a girl walking to school. Hummels that were manufactured for decades however are less valuable. The value of Cabbage Patch dolls had gone up since the 1980s, when they first became popular. In addition to being huggable, their "adaptability" and "uniqueness" were what made them so desirable. It is valued at $275. Below are marks and signs to identify Hummel figurines. The figure's condition will ultimately determine its value, as one is unlikely to find one in a box. Sold For: $700.00 This vintage kid is from 1986 but is still in such mint condition that she was able to be listed as "new." She also comes with her original clothing, which bears the Cabbage Patch logo. 5. What's the difference between Hummel and Goebel figurines? Different colors were used in different years, and the signature also sometimes had the year listed next to it. Each 4 inches tall figure has either an instrument or doing something boys play with. One of the factors that can push the value of a Cabbage Patch Kid doll from the hundreds to the thousands is if the doll comes with the original box, birth certificate, and adoption papers, and if the doll itself and its original clothing have limited damage or staining.[1] The original "Little People" dolls are also more valuable if their adoption papers, original clothes, birth certificate, and Xavier Roberts signature are intact. Furthermore, each cabbage patch doll box also contained a "birth certificate" containing the kids' first and middle names, making the dolls as personal as the children who wanted to adopt them. They are measured at 19cm. Colors Like the amount of porcelain, Hummel figurines are painted using specific color palettes that were defined by Maria herself. See also 15 Rarest and Most Valuable Marbles Ever SoldEuropeans would buy the figur